▶ Old World, New Design

Born and raised in Spain, Jorge Dalinger credits his heritage as the main inspiration behind the intricately carved ceilings, ironworks, woodworks and stencils his company designs and hand produces. "I would say my work has a Mediterranean style, but with a southern Spain/Moorish flavor," says Dalinger, who first entered the design world as a teenager, styling hair and designing clothes. "With Gothic arches and movement, the ceilings become passionate works of art." Starting at $50,000.

◀ A Chip off the Old Block

After branching out from the family marble business in 1956, Luigi Antolini and his sister founded their own company with the ambitions of reaching overseas markets and offering a larger selection of stone products from quarries around the world. Today, the Antolini Luigi Company features gemstones, semiprecious stones, shellstone, granite and marble in an array of colors, such as artistic gold, ruby velvet and blue barracuda. Their latest luxury collections include amethyst, petrified wood, mother-of-pearl and a variety of quartzes.
